THE TASMANIAN DEVIL.

which glided stoat-like into their unprotected yards and destroyed in single nights entire stocks of pigs and poultry. They were consequently forthwith marked for vengeance and extermination. Snare were laid for them in all directions, hunts were organized, and trackers engaged and paid by contribution. It followed that the devils diminished with sensible rapidity, whilst those that remained gradually took refuge in the thickest woods and rocky caverns, till at length they disappeared completely from their ancient haunts, and were only to be seen or heard of in distant or inaccessible retreats.

 And well adapted for all kinds of work. The capacity of the mill is 1000 ft. of lumber per day with ease.

"The Tasmanian Devil is a beast about the size of a large bulldog, in appearance something between a polecat and a bear, but in kind a poucher, or, as they called him formerly in the blue report books, the Ursus Sarcophilus. And it is not only English that call him devil, his name in French is diable, and in German teufel, and I am told the Royal Society has given the Latin name of devil to the whole race.

"The settlers were at first quite ignorant of the sort of animal they had to deal with, and a story is told of a young Dutch colonist of the name of Brechevoort, who lay in wait one night to take revenge on what he supposed to be an opossum or a lagyure. Armed with a stick, he waited long for the coming of his imagined enemy, and was just about to dismiss the boy that kept him company, when he heard a rustling amongst some dry leaves which he had strewn expressly at the entrance of the den-roost. He thereupon, with a plank, closed quickly the hole through which he supposed the yard to have been entered, and ran forward to confront the robber face to face. At first he could perceive nothing, but presently described two small eyes intent upon his movements from an adjoining shed. Nothing doubting, he ran forward, and aimed at the murderer's head what he deemed to be a decisive blow. The next moment he found himself on the ground moaning with pain, and remembered no more till he discovered himself in bed, with his father on one side, and on the other a veterinary surgeon, who was the only doctor in the colony. It appeared the blow had been no sooner struck than the devil had rushed by the lower part of the leg, had thrown him with violence to the ground. At this moment the boy, with great presence of mind, had let loose the dog, which in turn had fallen on the devil and diverted his attention from the prostrate youth. The dog was killed in the encounter, and the devil would have returned to his former victim had not the youth's father arrived in time, and paralyzed the desperate animal with a gunshot close from the muzzle. The bone of the leg was splintered, and young Brechevoort was long in recovering. He afterwards vowed vengeance on the whole race of devils, and became in time the most determined and foremost of their persecutors. He is still alive, and takes pleasure in relating how the venion retarded his recovery when he learnt that the infernal brute which had well-nigh bitten his leg off had been allowed to escape with its life. The father had supposed it dead, but the tenacious villain had revived during the flight of the adventure, and had profited by its departure unseen."

A Rare Chance.
 An excellent Hotel Property is offered for sale, situated at Stanhope, just over the Sussex line, 200 yds. from the Iron Works and within that distance of the depot of the Pat. Lack & West. R. R. The building has just been completed and is in a good condition—plenty of Fruit Trees upon the lot.

"His natural propensities are those of the gluttonous or sluggish kind, and he will be quiet enough when gorged with flesh, and let to undisturbed repose, but the slightest provocation, the merest and most unintentional observation will turn him at once into a veritable fiend. He then becomes instantly the very type of senseless fury, attacking all before him dead or living, and flying with equal fierceness at a mastiff or a barn-door. Nor is there, whilst life is left to him, either truce or quarter; as long as a shred of flesh remains to tear, or a last bone to gnaw, he fights on regardless of the numbers that surround him, or of his own subsiding strength, until at length his jaws snap faintly, and his life goes gradually out with an infernal snarl.

"Though taken young and brought up in captivity, his nature undergoes not the slightest modification. He lives to the last the same surly life, and usually dies in some mad struggle with the bars of his cage. After years of experience he repeats the same acts of profligate and exhausting frenzy. Without apparent motive he rushes at the wall, beating the air like a rabid lunatic, uttering long growls that seem to choke him, till they break out suddenly into a piercing bark. He shows not the smallest attachment to his guardians or feeders, whom he menaces and swears at from the moment they approach him till they pass completely out of sight. When tired out or overfed he becomes stupid and sleepy, rolls himself up into a corner, and falls into a luscious slumber from which it is not always easy to rouse him. Nothing can be done to prevent this habit, and he is consequently a great nuisance to his keepers."

Saturday, Jan. 20, 1872.

New Jersey Legislature.

TRAVEL, Jan. 17.—Mr. Chase of Camden, will this afternoon introduce a joint resolution in the House, recommending to Congress the purchase of Independence Hall, Philadelphia, to be dedicated in 1878. The afternoon will probably be taken up with speeches on this subject, several members having prepared themselves.

The State Agricultural Society, in session to-day, re-elected the officers of last year. There was a large attendance.
Governor Trick was elected Vice President.
George Richards, J. C. Little and J. W.
Crahn were added to the Directors. Wm.
A. Morrill was put on the Executive Committee instead of Phineas Jones and George R. Damm made Corresponding Secretary.

Mr. brother is here to-day, seeking legislative action to order a new trial, or at a stay of proceedings. He is not known to have any Senator or member espouse his cause as yet.

Mr. Mitchell, for the better security of cities and towns against contagious diseases, authorizing the establishment of a board of health, creation of hospitals, compulsory vaccination, and disinfection in every incorporated city and town.

Mr. Ditcher, sup. to the Passaic Valley and Peapack R. R., now known as the West Line Railway, authorizing an extension from Essex into Hudson Co. at the Hudson river; also to construct branch lines from some point on their present line in Clinton township, Hunterdon county, or from any other county through which that road may pass. Morris, Essex and Hudson excepted, to some point in Warren Co., near Phillipsburg.

Bills were also introduced to allow local option in grants of land.

Assemblyman Williams, of Orange, proposes to have passed a bill by which the State can be authorizing to make a cut through Bergen Hill large enough for all possible needs of the present and future.
This proposed cut is to be 300 feet wide, and is to be for the use of all other roads.

The expenses to be borne by the State, and it is proposed to tax each passenger, during the first five years, one cent, in order to reimburse the State.

question, brought before him by the peo-voked by the vote of June last. The li-
