POETIC.

DIGGING FOR GOLD.

A shiftless husbandman there was

Whose garden, run to weeds,

Yielded to his wife's whimsy

Not served for pasture needs.

Neighbors around were growing rich

While he was growing poor,

And poverty and wretchedness

Were over at his door.

One night this shiftless farmer dreamed

That his garden ground

He could not tell exactly where

Might be found gold.

Strange omen of gold, by pirates torn

From north of the main,

Might all be his with little toil,

And he could smile again.

At early morn, with pick and spade,

He dug him to his work,

Not caring to secure a breath before

The evening's falling morn.

The shifting shadows grew a while,

Then turned them to their fell;

The searcher for the gold kept on Upheaving tons of soil.

Again he dreamed the gold was there;

He dug the garden o'er

From side to side—no one else

Was there to see him dig.

At night came hands and strengthed the ground

With weeds of fruit and grain;

He knew it well, but did not dig

The garden o'er again.

Came autumn: he had long before

His harvest had begun,

But the vision of the gold was still

Was often in his mind.

The seeds had grown, and fruit had come;

His garden fairly bloomed

With Nature's wealth of gold above

The gold he thought he found.

Aye! Earth yields gold to all who ply

The hoe and spade with care,

Not the mean man who robbes his soil

But the rich harvest's share.

Scarcely, then, for gold; but as you go

Plant fruit and flower and grain;

Such digging in the earth for gold

Will never be in vain.

A hoe flew out in the sunny air

By a boy so blithe and young,

Who laughed and seemed without a care,

And would not let his tongue.

The scene it changed; with sob and shriek

The youth of heaven rang

And home and field the bee so meek,

While the small boy held his stung.

Mowed Miller on a summer day

On older gold than the bay;

Beneath her foot grew a mass

Of the red soil as coarse as grass.

Singing she worked, and her discordant lay

The birds from the fields all scared away.

JOE, THE WOLF.

BY MARION J. KENT.

Battle Mountain, nearly the centre of the desert State of Nevada, is not a particularly attractive village. A railroad office and a freight depot, a row of board houses and saloons, and a cluster of unpicturesque dwellings comprise its extent. At the time of which I write,

some five years ago, it was a lively place, however, and a rough one. A small army of teamsters and miners, and a series of three-card monte men who had made it their headquarters, kept the otherwise peaceful village in a ferment of wild excitement. The course of these restless passions was marked by periodic shooting scrapes, frequent fist encounters, and occasional drunken brawls.

Half-dozing one day in a saloon, I was aroused by the remark most emphatically delivered: "It's fourteen inches between my eyes, and I smell like a wolf!" The speaker, a large, magnificently proportioned ruffian, supplemented the peculiar description of himself with: "Pardie, come an' drink!" With the exception of myself every man in the room gathered around the bar, addressing the powerful standard of taste as Joe. The glasses were filled and tipped, and he turned and noticed me. I saw the quick, wicked flash of anger in his eyes. After a momentary survey he broke silence, and these words followed: "You from the city, ain't yer?"

"I am."

"You don't know me, do yer?"

"I don't."

"Take a drink an' git acquainted then."

"Smoke then."

"Don't smoke."

"Do yer shoot?"

"Not worth a continental."

My years of acquaintance acquired as a correspondent, and my knowledge of aggressive characters, did not prevent me from feeling some uneasiness as I observed my interrogator's dextrous fingers slide to his belt and grasp the hilt of his "whistler." An unpleasant termination of the conversation was avoided by the strange appearance of a woman who stepped from the overland train,

just then arrived, and directed her steps toward the saloon. She was rather a comely looking female of thirty-eight or more, and evidently ill and suffering from the effects of an extended sojourn at the place. She was dressed in the fashion of the day, and her features were handsome. She was looking at

 This exhibit, as the Wino justly remarks, shows "that one dollar today will purchase more of the above staple articles of clothing and food than could be bought with three dollars in what are now called the 'flesh times' of 1865." The average rate of wages has decreased from what it was in 1865; yet the decrease is not at all proportionate to the increase in the prices of the necessities which the workman needs to buy. If he were paid three dollars a day in 1865, and now paid but a dollar a day, his real wages, according to this exhibit, would be higher now than they were then. That is to say, he could buy more to supply the needs of himself and family with a day's labor now than he could then. This is the real test of what is the standard amount, as expressed in the terms of money; but what is the purchasing power of the money in which wages are paid. The paper dollar of 1865 and the paper dollar of 1870 contain precisely the same moneys. Each pledges the Government, or the bank issuing the paper, to pay to the bearer one dollar of specie, or gold, or silver. This is the real test. But not paid—had in 1865 a purchasing power much greater than that of the paper dollar. There were too many of these so-called paper dollars or their multiples in circulation, and none of them were redeemed in specie. Now, as the result of the resumption of specie payments, the paper dollar has the same purchasing power that the specie dollar has. It is the same money and will buy just as much of anything. The change is in the purchasing power of the paper dollar. Instead of being depreciated, as it was in 1865, it is brought to par.
 The workman's interests are best served by being paid for his labor in coin money, and by paying out coin money. Specie, unless debased by fraudulent coinage, is always the standard in value for purchasing power. Paper money is good or poor according as it is or is not redeemable on demand in specie. If thus redeemable, it is practically the equivalent of specie, because it will buy just as much. Redeemable paper money is good money and checks no body.
Pennack.
 Alas, who can tell what has become of the numerous correspondents who formerly kept the people posted as to the affairs of Pennack through the columns of the Era? For some time past we have been unable to hear from them, and we are glad to hear that they are now lawless.
 The farmers are now busy thinking (no work of the season in gathering the corn) is this pronounced a fair crop in this section.
 Several evenings ago Mrs. M. P. Ellis of Pennington, delivered a very excellent temperance lecture in the M. E. Church. Her lecture was very good, and she was well pleased, may expressing a desire that she might return to lecture again. She takes a view of this great temperance question from a Gospel standpoint, and in the religious manner in which she presents the subject also wins many friends. On the evening referred to 19 signed the pledge.
 The Ladies Temperance Union next Saturday evening in the Temperance lecture room the question will be discussed, "Is this the time to enact the Maine law in New Jersey." A spicy time is anticipated.
 Rumors were afloat that the Rev. T. C. Anderson was about to resign the pastorate of the Reformed Church, but we are pleased to learn that he has consented to remain in his present position.
 Mrs. L. A. Ayer, wife of Mr. Amos Ayer, after a long and painful illness died on Wednesday last in great peace and triumph. She was a devoted Christian, and her removal will not only be felt by her family but also by the entire community. Her funeral was largely attended on Friday from the Methodist Church, the pastor, Rev. I. M. Taylor, preaching a very appropriate sermon on the occasion.
 On Sunday evening last the M. E. Church was well filled and the worshippers participated in an interesting service of Sacred Song. The singing talent of this church is excellent, and we are pleased to the whole congregation giving praise to God we were carried back to the old time when congregational singing was common.
 Mrs. Elizabeth Ayer, wife of the late M. E. Church, died in the rear of the church so to give in honor for church enlargement.
 The many friends of Mr. John Allen who were so dangerously ill a week ago, will be glad to learn that he is convalescent with the exception of a slight cold.
 Mr. David B. McHenry of our midst, one of our best men, is recovering from consumption.

 FROM AFRICAN CONVENTION.
 "For a week past, most too true to render so everybody went to Somerville fair. We should have been there and seen the meeting of Newark League and Peapack anti-temperance boys.
 We learn that Mr. J. Allen, who has been for some time very sick, is a little better, and he hopes he may recover soon. Mr. Berline Miller is in the way, but with exception. Both of these men are among the best of our citizens and would be sadly missed.
 Last week the wife of Amos Ayer was buried after a long illness, in which she was a great sufferer, the funeral which was at the church was largely attended.
 We learn that Mr. Philbrook, the driver, has given the horse and carriage of place of labor so that if the remainder of the season in 1880 the old burying ground were removed the church would have ample room for lying in state or sheds, or both."

The Goat Companies.
 The coal combination still remains in doubt. President Rogers, of the Lehigh Valley, and President Green, of the Reading Railroad, were in New York on Wednesday last. Mr. George B. Newer, agent of the Lehigh Valley Coal Company, said Mr. Rogers had not as yet signed the agreement and that he would not do so. He also stated that his company had advanced their prices twenty-five cents per ton on all grades of coal. Judge Rogers, of our midst, is confident that the agreement would be signed before October 10th, and it was reported that the Lehigh Valley exporters would meet Thursday to consider the question.

Some of the Warren county judges are discussing the right of starez applicatio. It is always true to have experienced men discuss such subjects. —Dunkersville Independent.

All right, go ahead and discuss.

A barn on the Sutton place near Hacketts-town was destroyed by an incendiary fire on an early hour on Sunday morning last, with all its contents, including one horse. A suspected individual has been arrested.

The man Barry, who robbed the Bridgeville post office has been tried in the U. S. Circuit Court at Trenton, and sentenced to the penitentiary for three years. His wife and children are in destitute circumstances.

The personal property of the M. E. Church and parsonage at the Water gap was sold at Sheriff's sale recently. The Church has a debt of from $2,800 to $3,000 resting upon it, with very limited means whereby to meet obligation.

A fire was discovered in the laundry room of the basement of the Hacketts-town Centenary Institute, Sunday evening last, which was extinguished by a liberal supply of water. The loss was small but the severe reported to be great.

Tuesday evening last about 10 o'clock M. Sharp, the telephone operator at the Morris & Essex depot, at Philadelphia, was on his way home, he was shot at on Church street by a man who was in company with a woman. Mr. Sharp says he did not know the man or the cause for his shooting at him.

Robert Crumser, who attempted to wreck a train on the Blairsville Railway, on the night of July 4th, by placing a bar of iron and a large stone upon the track, was tried last week found guilty and sentenced to State Prison for one year. The crime was fortunately discovered in time to prevent an accident.

Madame T. Johnson, a tramp pabliher, was refused permission to lodge in the barns of George Rubart, of Sandyston, Sussex County, whereupon he not find to and destroyed three of them, together with a vast amount of hay and grain. On being arrested Johnson drew a revolver, but was overpowered and sent to the Newton Jail.

Isaac Sikker, who lives in that romantic section of Sussex known as Swantonville, the father of nineteen children, seventeen of which are living and his eldest of which is twenty-nine years of age. Mr. Sikker follows hunting and fishing for a livelihood, is about sixty years of age, and from his looks one would not think that he had yet commenced to go down the shady side of life. His wife is a medium-sized, healthy looking woman, and several years younger than her husband. It takes most of their time of late years to visit their married children. —Dunkersville Independent.

"ONLY THE BEST"

Our stock of Drugs and Medicines, Elixirs, Pills and Chemicals are bought of the most reliable manufacturers. Our aim is to dispense them at the lowest prices that are made strictly in accordance with pharmaceutical rules, out of the best materials, without any attempt to undersell their strength, for the sake of greater gain, which would not only be an injustice to the patient, but also to the physician who is disappointed of the effect which the medicine should have if of the proper strength. Physician's prescriptions prepared with care. Children receive the same amount as their parents. Our stock is large and varied and embraces everything usually found in a well stocked drug store.
